

Hook:

I'm about to teach you to run your first cash-flowing property in the next ninety days using "AirBnB Arbitrage."

This is without a deposit upfront, monthly loan servicing, or tying yourself down.

Everything that you're going to learn throughout the next few minutes of this free recorded training could genuinely change the trajectory of your entire life.

I'm only saying that because it's singlehandedly responsible for me being in the position that I am right now.

I've tried my very best to keep this as simple and concise as possible so that you're no longer in the dark by the end of it.

Super Hook:

Let me just give you some context real quick about my backstory, my lifestyle, and everything in between, in case you're new here.

I walked away from everything that was lined up for me, because I was already getting great marks in high school and had been accepted into university for optometry.

I spent years chasing my tail by attempting and failing various business models like ecommerce, crypto, trading, high-ticket sales, and agency work.

I ended up getting scammed for large sums of money by a con artist in a shady deal.

I'm now running twenty cash-flowing properties that make me over $100,000 per month.

I've worked with dozens of students in order to help them do the same.

There are so many others just like me that are making the most of their lives instead of going down the typical route.

Lead:

It will all make a lot more sense once you've heard this story about two people trying to earn from fruit on a hot summer's day.

The first one decides to plant and grow a tree.

They want to have ownership over something that produces fruit.

They need a seed for it right now, they must water it every single day, and they have to remain patient for a couple of years.

They are very lucky to have this seed in the first place, they end up making sure that it hasn't died off, and they must wait ages for all of it to pay off.

They don't realize that this was really in the park's best interest all along.

The second one decides to partner up with somebody else who has already planted and grown a tree.

They arbitrage the relationship between that person and the passerbys by taking the fruit and turning it into a juice that can be sold to them in exchange for a cut.

They need a juicer for it right now, they can constantly give the owner of the tree their cut, and they shortcut the waiting altogether.

They understand that not many others know about this trick just yet.

Making the most of your life instead of going down the typical route is very similar in that sense.

Most people try to plant and grow a tree even though they could flip the script by partnering up with somebody who has already planted and grown one.

You need to come to terms with the fact that you're allowed to stop prioritizing ownership and start doubling down on arbitrage.

Problem:

Let me explain what I'm referring to in that story by planting and growing a tree.

It's traditional real estate.

It was engineered to serve the banks, not the public.

The capital and the income hurdles exist to extract from rather than enhance your circumstance.

There are three reasons why this approach is such a problem.

The first is that it requires a deposit upfront.

This means that you never even get the chance, because it's like trying to unlock a door with a key that you simply don't have.

The second is that it requires monthly loan servicing.

This means that you end up working for the bank, since the majority of your income goes straight towards them.

The third is that it requires tying yourself down, which defeats the purpose of doing all of this in the first place.

This is why traditional real estate is the worst approach that you could be taking.

A lot of people are under the impression that ownership is the safest method, but it only feels this way because it's been the status quo for the longest time.

It's also a very common misconception that appreciation makes it all worth it in the long run, but you're bleeding out in the present with nothing but the hope of returns in the future.

You can think of this like planting and growing a tree in order to earn from fruit on a hot summer's day.

Solution:

Let me explain what I'm referring to in that story by partnering up with somebody else who has already planted and grown a tree.

It's called "AirBnB Arbitrage."

It takes advantage of a crack in the system for regular people.

You're simply pocketing the difference between what you're being charged and what they're paying.

There are three reasons why this approach is the solution.

The first is that it asks for a furnishing budget upfront.

This means that you can begin today, since it removes the main barrier to entry.

The second is that it pays itself off monthly.

This means that you experience a snowball effect, which boils down to your first cash-flowing property enabling you to run many more.

The third is that it isn't associated with any bureaucracy.

This means that you have success now as opposed to decades later, because you're not being held back by things like laws or regulations.

This is why "AirBnB Arbitrage" is the best approach that you could be taking.

A lot of people are under the impression that it's unrealistic to rent something out in order to rent it out again, but you're taking the hassle off both their hands in exchange for the spread.

It's also a very common misconception that the landlord will cut you out and do it themselves, but they're interested in long-term leases, not short-term rentals.

You can think of this like partnering up with somebody else who has already planted and grown a tree in order to make money from fruit on a hot summer's day.

Training:

You're probably wondering how this actually works, and it can be boiled down into three pillars.

The first is locating the landlord that you're renting from.

It all starts with getting the owner of the property to say yes.

You need the numbers working out properly, and the place has to be in an area where people actually want to stay, near transport or attractions.

It's important to understand that landlords are only concerned about their rent being paid and their property kept in good condition, so frame yourself as preferable to a standard tenant.

A great strategy would be reaching out to them in the places that everybody else overlooks, with depth and width simultaneously.

One of my students had two landlords agree within the span of less than a week.

The second is attracting the guests that you're renting to.

This is where the cash flow of the property occurs.

It's important to understand that the first impression the listing gives off will ultimately determine its success.

You need it standing out amongst the crowd, because that will result in the highest impact across everything.

A great strategy is keeping things like seasons or events in mind for your arrangements in order to maximize stay volume and value.

One of my students was able to offset an entire month's worth of rent from a single guest booking a long weekend.

The third is scaling this beyond yourself.

There's a protocol that you must follow in order to really take charge here.

You need the necessary systems like smart locks, automations, and SOPs in order for the property to stop depending on you.

A great strategy is building a team around these systems that consists of virtual assistants, cleaners, and receptionists.

It's important to understand that doing this for one is like doing this for infinitely more, so it's just a repetition game from there on out.

One of my students is running multiple cash-flowing properties while spending half of his time working in the mines.

You've got everything that you need to make the most of your life instead of going down the typical route with this approach once you've got those three pillars working together.

Offer:

I'm just going to be straightforward with you here and say that this isn't all sunshine and rainbows.

It can actually be quite a long-winded and difficult process to begin seeing success with when you're not doing it alongside others.

I spent the longest time doing traditional real estate until I eventually got into "AirBnB Arbitrage," and even then it was a struggle to get right, because I was doing it on my own.

I've been working on something that will prevent you from ending up in that scenario.

I'm talking about 'BnB Wealth Academy'.

This is where I work with you to run your first cash-flowing property in the next ninety days using "AirBnB Arbitrage."

You hold my hand throughout it all with one-on-one coaching calls.

You can tap into my knowhow through one-on-one access.

You have concepts explained in real time on the group coaching calls.

You are taught absolutely everything via comprehensive course content.

You become part of a community of others running their first cash-flowing properties.

Those are just the main deliverables, without even mentioning any of the bonuses as well.

The 'Landlord Proposal,' which is exactly what gets them to say yes.

The 'Agent Script,' which is word for word on both the calls and the messages with them.

The 'Deal Calculator,' which provides you with the numbers before signing anything.

The 'Guest Listing,' which helps you make the place as attractive as possible.

The 'Optimization Process,' which includes plug-and-play tools and resources.

I've also taken the weight off of your shoulders with my guarantee of working with you free of charge if you haven't got it working by the end of our timeframe.

This means that you're covered right up until the point where it doesn't even matter.

The only real way to lose here is by never taking a strike at winning.

I do need to be real with you about something though.

I'm only accepting students in cohorts of ten that stay open for the span of just three days.

This means that you should take immediate action if I've piqued your interest whatsoever.

I also want you to be aware of the fact that there is going to be an investment associated with it.

All I'm going to say is that I've seen others charging way more for way less, so you're getting back a multitude of what you're putting in.

It sits somewhere in the mid four figures, just to give you some peace of mind.

Call-to-action:

The next steps are quite short and sweet.

We will just use that to map all of this onto your situation and come up with a game plan.

Close:

Anyways, that pretty much sums everything up.

You know that traditional real estate, or planting and growing a tree, is engineered for the banks, not the public.

You know that “AirBnB Arbitrage,” or partnering up with somebody else who has already planted and grown a tree, takes advantage of a crack in the system for regular people.

You've seen others making the most of their lives instead of going down the typical route with this exact approach.

Nobody is going to take that first step other than yourself.

With that being said, I really do appreciate you watching all the way until the end of this free recorded training, and I hope you have a great rest of your day.

Cheers.
